Photoshop Elements: A step above Photoshop without the bells and whistles, Photoshop Elements is easy for beginners and specializes in photo editing.

GIMP: Free software that does everything Photoshop does, but don't let that stop you from learning new aspects of digital photography! In addition, many new photo-editing programs, like Apple's FaceTime, support layers in the same way Photoshop does. FaceTime is integrated into the iPhone and iPad, so you can immediately access and use Photoshop-like layers.

Illustrator: Adobe's vector art program can be used to create many different shapes and logos for you to use as images in the photo editor.

PowerPoint: This program is designed to make presentations and it also makes a great presentation for you to use in your photo editor.

Freehand: Created by Adobe to make clean images right out of the box, Freehand is a great tool for beginners to use.

Getting the Most out of the Photo Editor The best advice anyone can give you is to simply start and do not be concerned about getting the most perfect image immediately. This does not mean that you should print your work right away. You want to get as many ideas about how you want to use the images you make as possible, even if it means just pasting these photos into a presentation, or even simply pasting the images into a scrapbook.

1. Import You can import photos, videos or other images from your computer or web using different methods. Importing from Computer is the most popular and easiest method. Download a plugin and Import images to Photoshop from your computer. Import from URL To import images from different websites to Photoshop Elements, you will need to download a URL-linking plugin. There are two types of plugins. If you want to do batch importing, you should choose the batch linking plugin.

2. Adjustment Select: Select tools allow you to change the brightness, contrast, color or other settings of the image. You can modify almost all aspects of the photo you have imported, including the brightness, color or contrast.

Black and White The Black and White tools let you convert your image from any color to black and white. If you want to adjust the tone of black and white, you will need to adjust the Hue Saturation channel using the Hue/Saturation tool.

Channel Mixer There are four channels: Red, Green, Blue and the Alpha Channel. Using the Channel Mixer, you can easily adjust the effect of colors. Channel

Mixer Effects You can use the Channel Mixer Effects to apply light or dark effects to any channel. Auto Levels This function helps you normalize the image and make it simple and easy to adjust contrast and brightness. Auto Tone It allows you to turn the image into a grayscale image so that you can use it in any printing process. Auto Contrast Auto Contrast works by analyzing the whole image. When it finds areas with low contrast, it adjusts the brightness of the image to make it more uniform. Auto Lighting Effects The Auto Lighting Features let you add realistic lighting effects to your image. You can use these effects to change the light in the photo, add lighting effects, or create a silhouette. 3. De-Noise De-noising removes noise from the image, making images sharper and more colorful. Remove Noise You can use the Whitener tool to get rid of different types of noise. Median In addition to removing noise, Median removes salt and pepper, produces a nice-looking result, and effectively removes details. Remove Dust and Speckles You can use the Spot Healing Brush and Spot Healing Brush Tool to remove dust and 05a79cecff

NEW YORK (Reuters) - U.S. President Donald Trump's top economic advisor said on Monday a recent rise in the U.S. stock market was a validation of Trump's pro-growth policies, while critics said the Federal Reserve should be focusing on the jobs market. White House Advisor Gary Cohn attends a news conference at the White House in Washington, U.S., February 23, 2017. REUTERS/Kevin Lamarque In his first major policy address since being sworn in as White House chief economic advisor this month, Gary Cohn was cheered by pro-Trump groups and roundly criticized by Democrats who have questioned the administration's approach to public policy. "I see what you're doing here. You're all excited. And the stock market's up because you're doing well as a country," Cohn told a group of real estate investors on Monday, adding that recent criticism of Trump and his administration's economic policies had gone too far. Cohn's remarks, made in a Manhattan hotel, came as the Dow Jones industrial average.DJI rose 18.98 points, or 0.1 percent, to end the day at 20,654.28. The S&P 500.SPX was up 0.1 percent at 2,389.45, while the Nasdaq Composite.IXIC was up 0.2 percent at 5,877.59. Trump's supporters praised Cohn's presence in the West Wing. "This signals a president who is committed to strengthening our economy and doing something about the employment situation," said Frank Sharry, founder and president of America's Voice, a group that promotes minority and immigrant empowerment. President Trump, a former New York property developer, has taken a more populist stance on trade, a theme Cohn echoed in his remarks. "Our focus will be fixing our broken trade relationship with China and creating a level playing field," Cohn said. But Democrats pounced on Cohn's comments. "I don't know whether to laugh or cry," said Representative Bill Pascrell, a New Jersey Democrat. "He said, in effect, our economy is doing well because of Trump." Cohn said the Fed's rate hikes in 2015 and 2016 had been needed to support the economy but instead prolonged the President Donald Trump's Twitter feed is a constant flow of superlatives, claims and insults, seemingly pushing the outer limits of credulity. But one Trump tweet has been standing the test of time: a series of photographs showing the damage inflicted by Hurricane Irma on U.S. oil refineries and pipelines on the Caribbean islands of St. John and St. Thomas. As the path of Hurricane Irma moved closer and farther away from the U.S. mainland, Trump continued to insist it wasn't a problem for America, even going so far as to blame President Obama and Puerto Rico's Governor Ricardo Rossello for the refineries and pipelines' damage. And his claims were, at times, shared by other Republicans, including Gov. Rick Scott of Florida and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. The basic argument, articulated by Trump in a tweet on Sept. 10 and retweeted repeatedly by him and other top Republicans, was that Obama and Rossello had failed to close the refineries, while Trump had done the opposite by ordering the closure of all of Florida's refineries. This argument was debunked by a New York Times report in May. It was based on Obama's executive order issued June 5 that ensured the refineries were closed when Hurricane Harvey ravaged the Texas coast a month earlier, along with Florida Republican governors refusing to ask the Federal Emergency Management Agency to open its doors for emergency repairs. In the case of Hurricane Irma, Florida Republican officials, including Hatch, believed Trump was doing the right thing by shuttering the refineries, according to the Times. Echoing Trump's earlier tweets, Hatch, who represents Utah, had tweeted that "there is no doubt" the Obama administration would have refused to close the refineries had a hurricane struck Puerto Rico. Irma was caught in an epic battle between Category 5 winds and Category 4 water. The storm is continuing to weaken as it moves toward western Florida after it made landfall in the early hours of Sunday in the Caribbean. Irma's longest sustained direct hit with Category 5 winds is estimated to have occurred on the northern Leeward Islands as recently as Saturday. The flooding caused by the Category 5 winds has been terrifying to watch. But even before Irma hit the U.S. mainland, Trump had claimed the storm wasn't anything new for America. "By the way, in
