Q: What is the simplest way to convert strings into float? I've been doing some research on coding sites and found multiple ways to convert strings into float. I came across two methods: method1: `float myfloat = float.Parse(myString);` method2: `float myfloat = float.Parse(myString.ToString().TrimStart());` What is the difference between these two methods? Which one would be better to use? (I'm not concerned with code efficiency) A: Parse is a method of the CultureInfo class, so you are actually asking for a culture-specific value of a string. TrimStart gets rid of leading zeroes (or leading whitespace) before conversion. This is useful to prevent numbers that look like "0130" to be interpreted as "131", but could cause very confusing bugs if something is inserted "before" your string. For example, the value of a = "0123456789012345678901234509e8f5149f"

What's New in the Purple GroupMe?

GroupMe is a social messaging app that lets your friends chat, share and meet up with people who they know in real life. You can see when people have been online or away, let them know exactly where you are, add more people from your contact book and decide who can chat with each other. GroupMe is great for both personal and business use. Not only can you let your friends know where you are, or stay in touch with people back home, you can also use it to make conversations happen with new friends, business connections or even relatives. With group video chat, you can chat and hang out together without having to be online. Chatting about the latest trends, news or even just sports, it's the perfect way to keep in touch with friends and colleagues who might otherwise be spread out in different cities. From the official GroupMe website: "GroupMe is a messaging app that helps keep people in touch without being online. Just like WhatsApp, but for Groups. Our goal is simple: we want to make groups a fundamental part of your social life. Just like WhatsApp and its billion users, we will focus on maximizing the value of the group as a social and business tool, driving product development to improve the user experience. You can continue to message all your friends in the same way you always have, but now you can talk and text about that big pitch or ask someone for a business card in the same app your friends are using to keep in touch."
