To install, download and run the application, right click on the file (such as the installer or executables) and select "Run As Administrator". For VSTS build tasks (and tasks from other systems), you'll need to run the installer as a post-build step before the build is run. You can also add the program as a startup item. The public release of the program is still undergoing some testing, and thus should be considered incomplete for most use cases. However if you would like to get involved or check out the source code, please feel free to do so. Licence and Feedback: You can download the latest version of the application here: The licence for the project can be found in the file LICENSE.txt If you have any problems with or find bugs in the program, please let me know. You can also leave a comment below if you like. If you use the app on a regular basis and would like to have it added as a startup item, please leave a comment below. Thanks and Happy Coding! UPDATE (2016-04-04): You can now view the requirements for embedding images in your CSS and other similar files here: Here is an updated release, to fix the problem with the cache not being cleared after a build was made (and would result in the same image being used for several years). Version 2.0.3 (2015-07-26) In this release, I cleaned up the source and added a new installer, which hopefully should work better with the Visual Studio installer. NOTE: The installer will look for the source folder (with the name "src") in the same folder as the exe. (If you want it to look in a different directory, edit the project file). NOTE: There is another installer that will place the source folder in the Program Files folder. Changes: * New installer * Code cleanup * Clearer, easier to understand code Initial release with a preview of what was to come:
