It blew up a few hours later. A group of French doctors are investigating why a six-year-old boy with a history of muscular dystrophy had fallen mysteriously ill. The boy, who lives in the French city of Montauban, had recently begun to complain of a stiff neck and headaches. The unnamed child was sent to the pediatrician. Doctors noticed he had a mild fever, but because of his age, they did not suspect a serious illness. They sent the boy home with a painkiller and advised him to return to the hospital if he was not better in 24 hours.
