How good was it for the Department of Justice to open a "high profile" sexual harassment case in this setting, at this moment? The way it was handled, the "I'm a woman" class is expecting that the Senate will be evenly divided on the Judiciary Committee, with only four Democrats and four Republicans, and the vote will go to the final confirmation to break deadlock. In that case, good PR and an early win for the Obama administration on the Hill could, as they say, be priceless. The sexism Warren had to face was so gross, and the hypocrisy of this business so galling, that we had to offer her props and tell the world she was a brave heroine. She is both, but that's what we want you to think. Like the president, no one can claim all this—including him—was accidental. The questions still surround the White House. When will the Kerry nomination get an answer in time for confirmation? Why did the president stay silent after the nominees were seated in February for the confirmation hearings
