What's new:

, Those We Lost "The One We Found, Those We Lost" (titled "The One We Found... and How They Died" in the paperback edition) is the eleventh episode of the second season of the American science fiction television series Babylon 5, and originally aired on November 8, 1993. In the episode, a newly remodeled and upgraded B5-M5 becomes the fastest "space dog" in history in an attempt to prove she is the fastest dog in the universe, despite having no prior experience with speed. This adaptation of an Alexander Key's 1966 children's novel Little Merlin about the life of a puppy, a gift from Londo Mollari, eventually becomes a literary cornerstone of the B5 universe. Babylon 5 creator and executive producer J. Michael Straczynski was heavily influenced by the book, and the episode adaptation would influence the direction of the series. Plot B5-M5, the most sophisticated and powerful dog in the Minbari-Earth Alliance, is installed with a data link and a disk-drive which is designed to accept voice and data transmissions from home base. After being fastened to a docking station in the front of a heavily modified Humvee, she is left to her own devices and unleashes a well-trained ability to hear messages left for her while she is en route. When she is activated in transit to Earth, the station expresses the need to deliver an envelope to Earth. From the envelope, she collects a paper strip which reads: Ransom, Mollari, Room 3. Mollari is much more interested in the repository of brain tissue that the station intends to extract, but after a period of intense research he forgets about the strip and never discovers its contents until he is notified to pick up the envelope. Enacting a logical observation, he uses the address for a Medlab, and leaves before sending for inspection or personnel, revealing to Y'vah's superiors that the envelope was for Mollari, which causes concern to the race for the Far Stars. Mollari and Yar'El are questioned by a group of Medics, who point out that it is his diplomatic status as an ambassador that allows him to keep the brain tissue and use it for any purposes he might wish. When Mollari explains that they still have the envelope and that the biological matter was a gift, they inform him that they will have to destroy the tissue. He is then brought into a Medlab, where he is "cle
