to feel like if I don't start soon I'm going to forget I was planning on starting a soup! I also don't want to start boiling the water as I'm worried it will take forever to get it going. I have lots of food in the freezer and fridge so if I start the soup tonight it should be well ready for Friday. It's going to be a chicken soup base with lots of different flavours. I'm going to add chicken, noodles, ham, mushrooms, onion, carrot, celery, garlic, parsley, tarragon, thyme, bay leaf, paprika, pepper and some other stuff I can't think of at the moment. Oh and a couple of raspberries for a touch of sweetness. I'm going to simmer it for 2 hours. Is this a long enough time for it to cook? 15 Answers 15 If you start an 8-quart pot and fill it with water, you should be fine. It sounds like you are going to be simmering for something like 1.5 to 2 hours -- possibly longer for a very mild soup. Of course you might never get it all done. I would use a slow cooker to go along with your kitchen timer/pot timer. If you are concerned about forgetting, I would pick a date on the fridge calendar that is a week or two in advance, and then make up my ingredients on that date. As @froofed said, you might not finish it in 2 hours. There's plenty of space to add other ingredients to a soup once it's started. That said, using a slow cooker is a good idea. It's a lot easier, especially if you have any extras to add to the soup that d0c515b9f4
