this program can be handy for creating bootable usb keys for installing new linux distros or using your computer on different systems or computers. it is also able to create multiboot usb keys that can be easily booted on other computers. it is a simple to use software. simply download it to your desktop, install, and run the program. then you are wondering why you cannot work with sardu multiboot creator for linux. let me explain it in short. sardu multiboot creator is not a software program that actually detects the multi-boot usb storage devices and their supported bootloaders and oses. in other words, it's a software which helps you burn the iso files, but this iso file burning is not supported by sardu multiboot creator as it has many limitations and restrictions in terms of multi-boot usb devices. the reason for this is simple. sardu multiboot creator does not include a code or a software program to detect and understand multi-boot usb storage devices and their bootloader. the only function that it includes is to burn the iso files to your usb flash drive. every iso file comes with a label of its os and bootloader, for example windows 7/8 has 2 or more bootloader options depending on your hardware and so on. again i will repeat that sardu multiboot creator is not a software that installs multibootusb or actually presents you the bootable/multi-boot usbs with their installed os. instead, it's a program that runs in the background and burns the iso files from the bootloaders into your usb flash drive. in a nutshell, sardu multiboot creator can only be used to burn iso files and then use these iso files to boot each of your oses at once. so if you use the same iso files for windows 8 and linux distro (i.e. in the same usb drive), you will face a problem because windows 8 will overwrite the 8.0.1 or 8.1.0 version of the iso files.
