There are also a lot of people looking for hacks for CS 1.6 even today so thats why I have the best one for you - How to get it to work: Right-click.Q: How to reverse a list while maintaining the order that was originally present in the list? I need a function that takes a list and returns a list with the same items

(the same indices) but in reverse order. the following function reverses a list but it doesn't maintain the order of the original list. How to overcome this? def reverse(my_list): return [list(my_list[i]) for i in range(len(my_list))] A: Your function works fine, it is a good approach, only it is just that it also returns the original list (so the index after, which is not what you wanted to return). You can just return the reversed list instead: def reverse(my_list): return [list(my_list[i]) for i in range(len(my_list))] #

However, it would be much better to use the reversed function (written in the form of a class in Python), which will take care of the correct return value for you: >>>

class Reverse(object): ... def
__init__(self, my_list): ... self.my_list
= my_list ... def __reversed__(self):
... return self.my_list[::-1] ... >>> r
= Reverse([1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6]) >>> r
[5, 4, 3, 2, 1, 6] >>> list(r) [6, 5
