Digikam is a free software application for managing digital photographs. It works directly on your digital camera and allows you to organize your photos, view and edit them. Note: It is a GNOME application. Key features Organize your collection into albums Create slideshows Edit your photos View photos, and apply photo editing tools Export and print photos Tag your photos Easily sync photos with other devices digiKam Screenshots: digiKam Reviews: Best photo organizer app I have tried I needed to organize my pictures for quite some time. Unfortunately, my pictures were scattered and I had no idea where my photos were. I decided to try out some photo managers and try digiKam, the best one. It is a KDE application and it is really easy to use and extremely simple. I highly recommend it. I'll have to admit, I was a little bit disappointed with the interface at first. It's not as sleek as i'm used to. It's not hard to use, but you can also have the most basic knowledge of using digiKam. The biggest features are slideshow and tagging. I only really use slideshow to make a slideshow of my pictures and I tag my pictures to a specific folder, so that i can find them by tag. The tagging feature is better than the simple tagging function of GIMP (I didn't know that was a possibility, but it was a great feature!) I like the fact that I can export my pictures in different ways. I find digiKam's export tools very handy. I also use digiKam to access my camera directly on my computer and upload my pictures to the site I use, it even lets me post pictures.Q: How to trigger the dropdown menu in this code? I have some issue with this code and i couldn't figure it out. When i click the button, I want to open the dropdown menu. But it's not opening on my click. Please help me how to make it work. Thanks $(document).ready(function()
