So I am trying to say I want to add one day. This says that the DateTime of today is already Sunday even though I have added 1 day. How can I add 1 day to the current date of current day to get tomorrow? EDIT: My problem is that I want to give an input from the user, lets say they put that they want to add 3 days to the current date. Then I want to add that 3 days. So I have a DateTime fromDate that I want to subtract then add the days that I want it to add. A: As it turns out, now that I think about it, you don't have to do any of those things. You can just do this: // DateTime today is July 20, 2012 in.NET 2.0 and above. DateTime today = DateTime.Today; // The current month is 7, so divide by 10 to get the current year. int year = today.Year / 10; // Add the number of days the user requested. // They'll want to add 3. int days = 3; // Make sure they ask for the correct day. DateTime targetDay = today.AddDays(days); // I want to show that the target day is in fact tomorrow. Console.WriteLine(targetDay.DayOfWeek == DayOfWeek.Friday); // true A: If the user wants to add 3 days to the current date, here's how you do it: int daysToAdd = 3; DateTime toDate = DateTime.Today; DateTime date = toDate.AddDays(daysToAdd); Note that I don't subtract days first, I just
