I have used LR since its early days and I'm still using it. I recently went back to Photoshop for a lot of reasons. In general, I prefer to work mostly in Photoshop with a quick go to other tools as needed.

I like the 'real world' experience. I can work with a raw file, rescan with Photoshop, export/export as a PSD, create layers, layers adjustment, and for the most part using the most featured tools, those not offered by PS. Adobe has made some improvements to the tool layout and overall workflow.

Although PS uses the same File format, its not the same format as PS. PS creates a normal PSD file with any settings you want other than the website file extension. PSD used to have the option to create a website or docx file and it would set those options once you open that file. But now, has this classic option and you have to change the file type for that.

I think this their attempt to offer the new file format to websites and blogs, and consumers. I will admit that I don't use Photoshop that much for photo manipulation or for non-web file formats.

The price is a concern for some and I'm not personal on this, but I think its worth the money and I don't really pay that much for other software. Wow, this is actually pretty interesting how the Adobe apps are becoming much more mobile than the Desktop versions of the products. Just shows the benefit of having full hardware access on a tablet device. I have been a Mac user since 1994. My entire professional career has been in the graphic arts industry, from traveling to photos, creating ads, album covers, greeting cards, flyers, banners, catalogs, etc. I worked for one of the largest advertising agencies of the time, many of the big publishing houses, and as a graphic designer and photographer before becoming a stay-at-home dad and tech-trailblazer.

If you would like to manually edit your photos, you can download a template that can help you create your images. The templates also come pre-loaded with filters and retouching tools to make final image edits faster. You can even customize your templates if you can't find one that exactly meets your needs or is already set up for your Photoshop software. DO NOT download any file from any website or social media link. Hackers are constantly trying to steal files, upload your work, or sell your work to others. If you do download from any website or social media you may lose your work. Your best bet is to always save your files to your hard drive or cloud storage. The Spot Healing Brush tool is designed to remove small blemishes or other anomalies from a photo. It can be used to correct errors that result from cropping, or it can be used to fill in a few missing areas in a photo. The Magic Wand tool can be used to select an area of an image. The Magic Wand tool is great for locating areas of a photo that have the same color and for filling those areas. The Airbrush tool lets you apply color (that you have selected with an active brush) to a photo without having to use a mask. The Clone Stitching Tool is used to remove a background, while maintaining the edges and shape of the foreground, in a way similar to how sewing removes seams. The Cloning tool can also be used to create realistic looking hair - just like in real life. What It Does: The Content-Aware feature is a new and powerful tool in Photoshop that looks at your image in depth. It examines the picture for areas that have too little color, such as odd-colors of right-side-up text, skinny lines, and dark areas. Whatever it determines are the best places to add color, it duplicates those areas in the image. e3d0a04c9c
